

SPINE TUMORS

Overview:

Every patient is different. Proton therapy can be a good option for treating spinal tumors because proton therapy has the potential to lead to fewer short- and long- term side effects to critical structures, such as the brain, spinal cord, and lungs.

Experts:

Mark V. Mishra, MD, William Regine MD and Young Kwok MD

Dr. Mishra and Dr. Regine were named a Top Radiation Oncologist by Baltimore Magazine in 2020

Meet our Experts

Proton therapy may be a good option for you if...

- You have a chrodoma
- You have an ependymoma
- Click here for more

View full list

FACTS ABOUT SPINE TUMORS AT MPTC

- More than 450 patients treated.
- Treatment Length: On average, 5 - 6 weeks

Let's schedule a consultation for you to meet one of our specialists who will discuss your specific diagnosis and health history to determine if you are a candidate for proton therapy.

Meet our patients:

Eileen Fauteux

MPTC Clinical Trials:

As of February 2021 we don't have specific spine tumor trials open, but there are three clinical trials that are open to all patients.

View full list

